After you register for a class, be sure to complete the following steps:

Get the material. After you have paid for the class, your study guides will be mailed to you and the exam simulator link and log in information will be emailed to either the participant or the agency owner as instructed. If you do not receive the materials in a timely manner, please contact us.

Review the Material. Study the material intently prior to the class. Our successful student feedback tells us that this is one of the keys to success in passing on the first attempt.

Register for the exam. The exams are administered for the State of Alaska by PearsonVue. We strongly recommend taking the exam within one week of the class if possible. Leave yourself a few days to review the material and take practice exams, but take the exam within 2 weeks of taking the class so the examples given in class have not faded.

PearsonVue: We suggest registering for the exam early to secure the date you want. The phone number for PearsonVue is (800) 274-5993 and the website is: <https://home.pearsonvue.com>. You may also use their online testing option. If you register for the two parts (property/casualty or life/health) in person testing on the same day, you avoid paying the exam fee twice. If you separate the exams and take them on two different days, you will pay two exam fees.

NOTE: exams are now available online with a web based proctor as long as your computer is equipped with a webcam.

Margaret Varlamos, LLC and ILP are in no way affiliated with PersonVue, and, as such, cannot comment on the actual exams. We suggest contacting PersonVue PRIOR to taking the license prep class if you have questions about the exam or the process. You may change your exam date without incurring a fee if you do so 48 hours or more before the scheduled date. PearsonVue must be contacted to do this. We recommend contacting the Alaska Division of Insurance if you have any questions regarding applying for a license once you have passed the exams.
